The Storm in Samoa.

Particulars of the Disaster as Learned by Letter.

ARRIVAL OF A STEAMER.

A Graphic Description of the Great Hurricane and the Fearful Struggles for Life Within Sight of Hundreds of People on Shore—How the Vessels Were Ground to Pieces on the Rocks—Divers Searching for the Dead and for Property Among the Wrecks—An Unparalleled Tale of Ruin, Heroism, Suffering and Death.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—The steamer Alameda arrived in this city at 8:30 o'clock Saturday evening, bringing advices from Apia up to March 30. The steamer stopped at the Samoan capital to take off many of the shipwrecked sailors. The following facts with regard to the hurricane are gleaned from the shipwrecked men:

The storm commenced at about 2 o'clock on Saturday morning, the 16th of March, and lasted until Sunday, at a little after 5 o'clock in the evening. The Eber was the first vessel driven on the shore reef. She broke up in pieces in a few minutes, only one officer and four men being saved. Pieces of the Eber are now strewn about the beach in all directions. When she struck the reef she keeled over into deep water, and probably her engines, much are of great weight, assisted in pushing up the vessel so quickly. The officers and the men immediately went to the American consulate, where all assistance possible was rendered them.

Shortly afterward the Adler also drifted on the same reef, a little further westward. It would hardly be credited by any person who had not seen it that such a heavy ship as the Adler could be lifted so high on the reef, which is uncovered at low water. She is now lying on her port side, high and dry, only a few feet of her side being under water at high tide. We have learned the exact number of the officers and men (19 only) who were lost from the Adler.

The United States steamer Nipsic was the next on the list of casualties. It was observable from the shore that she would not be able to hold out. She was drifting toward the reef, and at about 9 o'clock she headed for the shore and just touched the point of the reef with her rudder, which was carried away, together with her stern post, but by the skilful management of the captain and officers they succeeded in beaching her on the sand. Great credit is due for the manner in which the Nipsic was handled, for if she had gone on the reef a larger number of lives would undoubtedly have been lost. As it is, we learn that seven men were drowned, but all would have been saved if they had stuck to the ship. As we now write (Tuesday) she floats at high water. A number of Samoans and all the crew of the ship are busily engaged in preparing to bodge her off.

Early in the morning the Olga collided with the Nipsic, doing the latter considerable damage, carrying away her smoke stack, steam launch, whale boat and part of her bulwarks. On account of the smoke stack being broken off the furnaces would not draw to keep a full head of steam on. Except for this accident the Nipsic, which has powerful engines, might have ridden out the gale in safety.

On Thursday morning the Nipsic was safely floated to her old anchorage. Her propeller is too much injured to be repaired in Samoa. Her rudder is gone. We believe it is the intention of the admiral to fit a new rudder and send the Nipsic under sail to either Auckland or Sydney.

The Vandalia was the most unfortunate vessel of the United States squadron. She drifted about 9 o'clock near the Calhoun and the Olga, and came into collision with both. The Calhoun struck her with great force on the port, doing considerable damage. The Vandalia still continued drifting, almost in company with the Calhoun, but the latter vessel, having lost nearly all her anchors, put full steam on and went steadily out to sea. The Calhoun returned to port on Tuesday, and had suffered very little damage, except the loss of her bowsprit and some boats.

The captain of the Vandalia, seeing no hope of saving his ship, headed her for the shore, and in endeavoring to reach the sandy beach unfortunately struck the reef, and filled and sank before she could beach, within about fifty yards from the stern of the Nipsic. The captain, paymaster, pay clerk, lieutenant of marines and many men were washed overboard. The vessel was completely submerged and all hands had to take to the rigging, where they remained until the Trenton was drawn alongside, about 8 o'clock in the night, when most of the officers and crew got on the Trenton, excepting Lieut. Ripley, who jumped into the sea just before the mast gave way, and with great difficulty swam to the ship. He then procured a whale boat, and, with the aid of Samoans, got a line out to the wreck.

The loss of life on the Vandalia were the commander, three officers and thirty-nine seamen and marines. Divers had been engaged since Monday. On Tuesday the safe was recovered, which contained about $40,000. The Trenton in the while was gradually coming closer to the land. She had her bridge posts broken in, which left an opening, and the sea came in great quantities through this opening, and the smoke pipes getting into the fires. This was, unfortunately, fatal to the chances of saving the admiral's ships. Two engines were in order to keep up steam. All hands were ordered to the pumps, which were kept constantly going all day.

About 3 o'clock the Trenton had drifted down toward the Olga, which vessel was then about 500 yards from the reef. Both ships tried to avoid touching, but a collision was inevitable. The Olga's prow struck the Trenton on the quarter, opening a large breach and doing other damage. The Olga's bow was smashed. After the vessels cleared each other the Trenton drifted still further toward the reef, and one time held fairly well to her anchors, but at about 8 o'clock she dropped down just clear of the reef and on the Vandalia. The Trenton then was aground. She was broadside on the sunken vessel, and the poor fellows who had been on the Vandalia's yard about twelve hours got onto the Trenton, being assisted by the admiral's crew with lines and other contrivances.

The Olga, after shipping her cables and getting clear of the Trenton, managed to make headway against the sea for a short time, and hopes were entertained that this vessel, the last left ashore in the harbor, would be saved, but within half an hour she was run into one of the best positions for beaching in the harbor.

Capt. Douglas, of the schooner Lilly, the lately appointed pilot, was on board the Lilly when she sank, and who, after great struggling, managed to get on board the Olga, was mainly instrumental by his knowledge of the harbor and valuable suggestions which were followed by Capt. Erhardt, in beaching the Olga in a position where no lives would be likely to be lost. Capt. Douglas has spoken in very complimentary terms of the manner in which he was treated by the captain, officers and men after he struggled on the Olga in an exhausted condition.

The losses in the merchant shipping were:

The Godefrois bark, 463 tons; a total wreck.

The Lilly, schooner, from which two lives were lost; a total wreck.

The Upola, schooner, sixty tons; very likely to become a total wreck.

The Fituau, cutter, nineteen tons; total wreck.

The Tafua, schooner, total wreck.

The Nukunono, sketch, ashore.

The Vaitelle, cutter, sixteen tons, had her mast cut away.

The Utomopu, schooner, suffered some small damage, but it is now repaired and going with the mails to Tutuila.

The little schooner belonging to Mr. Meridith, about five tons, went ashore, but is not much injured.

Never before, we believe, in the history of wrecks in any harbor has such a clean sweep been made. The miraculous escapes of some poor fellows who were washed overboard from the different wrecks—a terrible time they must have had, some of them being hours in the foaming surf, are fearful to contemplate.

The Eber, the first vessel to go ashore, lost seventy-five lives.

The Adler lost twenty men.

The officers of the Vandalia were doing their utmost to save some cherished mementoes, and hired native divers. As a general thing the natives were honest, but one case stands out in marked contrast. Chief Engineer Green, of the Vandalia, had between $150 and $200 in gold. Green hired a diver, who said he could not save the money, as the stateroom door could not be opened. Green hired another diver, who asserted that the room was open. The first diver confessed to have stolen all the money but $150.

On Sunday morning boats were busily engaged all day in removing the men from the ship to the shore, which was accomplished without accident. All were removed before night. On Monday 250 Samoans from Mataafa's army and the men-of-war sailors were working hard all day saving property from the Trenton. Several Samoans and sailors were also engaged working on the other ships ashore. No lives were lost. The Trenton is a total wreck. One of the men was killed early in the morning of Saturday by being crushed among the timbers after the collision. His name was Joseph Hawlett, a colored man.

The Nipsic is fitted up with the Vandalia's funnel. The Trenton is hard and fast on the reef. Her bottom is full of holes and filled with water up to her gun deck. The crews have been working ten hours daily trying to save some of the rigging and personal effects and stores. The Vandalia is totally lost. Nothing can be saved from her.

Nearly every day since the wrecks of the vessels, bodies of the drowned are being washed up, greatly decomposed and unrecognizable.

Only about one-fourth of the bodies have been recovered. Some of these were badly mutilated. It was difficult to identify them, or even to tell the nationality, and it was finally determined to bury all in the same spot. The interments were as speedily as possible, owing to the extremely hot weather. Some of the bodies, including that of Paymaster Arms, were wrapped up in Samoan matting for burial. A body, thought to be that of Capt. Schoonmaker, was found up the coast some miles distant from the scene of the disaster. The bodies of some of the lost officers had not been recovered at last accounts, or if they came ashore so mutilated or decomposed that they were not positively identified.

The admiral wants to send the Nipsic home for repairs if she can stand the trip. Mataafa shows great concern for the American sailors. He has offered to them the use of the Samoan houses to protect them from the elements, but it was thought best to continue to keep the men together. They can best be controlled by the officers in the tents where they were when the steamer left Apia.

The political situation in Samoa remains unchanged. Mataafa declared some time ago that all the blood that had been shed was on account of German interference in Samoan affairs. He believed the war would end if the Germans would cease giving assistance to Tamasese, as the latter would be almost powerless alone. Mataafa hoped that Kimberly would formally protest against the part the Germans had taken. Should Malietoa be released by the Germans and return to Samoa, Mataafa says, the question of who should rule would be settled between Malietoa and Mataafa. There would be no trouble on this account, as Malietoa has resigned in Mataafa's favor.

A rumor is current in Apia that the admiral and consuls are endeavoring to arrange matters between Mataafa and Tamasese, so as to induce them to return to their homes until after the Samoan conference.

The Olga Arrives at Sydney.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 15.—The German war ship Olga, which was stranded during the recent hurricane at Samoa, has arrived here for the purpose of repairing her damages, which are slight. She brought from Apia the commander, two officers and thirty of the crew of the German war ship Adler, which was wrecked in the same hurricane.

The screw steamer Rockton, of 1,498 tons, will proceed from here to Samoa, where she will take on board the crews of the wrecked American war ships. She will then convey them to San Francisco.

The steamer Lubeck, from Apia, April 2, has arrived here. She reports that the Nipsic is so badly injured that it is doubtful whether she will be able to return to the United States.

The officers of the wrecked German war ship Eber were also on board the Lubeck. They will proceed to Germany on the steamer Hapsburg, which sails from here April 24.

One hundred men belonging to the German fleet, including three officers, remain at Apia to guard German interests.

The Adler lies in the same position in which the storm left her.

The hull of the Olga is sound, with the exception of a hole in her stern, which was made when she stranded. Two plates had been riveted over this hole, and the ship made no water during the voyage here.

Preaching on the Subject.

BALTIMORE, April 15.—The American's special from Annapolis says: Rev. Dr. Robert H. Williams, of the First Presbyterian church, preached a memorial service yesterday on the lost of the Samoan disaster, some of whom worshipped at his church when on duty at the naval academy. He took as his text psalm cvii, 23-24: "They that go down to the sea on ships, that do business in great waters, these see the works of the Lord and his wonders in the deep."

In the discourse the preacher dwelt upon the power and sublimity of the ocean which [illegible] cold, and said that whilst there was [illegible] difference to religion and great was [illegible] among seamen, yet there were few unbelievers or atheists. Among those lost at Samoa were those who had worshipped in this church who were Christian men. Others in the disaster, but not lost, had also sat in this church, among them a number of naval cadets.

At Crisfield, in the Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal church, services were held in memory of those who perished in the late storm on the Chesapeake. Rev. F. C. MacSorly made a pathetic prayer and addresses were delivered by United States Commissioner L. T. Dryden, Sheriff Long and others.

Services at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—The Germans and Americans held memorial services at different dates for the dead. At the German service Admiral Kimberly and other American officers attended.

No One to Blame.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—The Chronicle commenting on the details of the wreck of the war ship at Apia, says: "This account settles all doubts in regard to the responsibility for the disaster. It proves that American and German commanders did everything that good seamanship could do to save their vessels, and that the escape of the British ship Calliope was owing to the great strength of her engines. American officers proved their claim to superior seamanship, and the saving of the crews of the Trenton and Nipsic was due to the skilful handling of the vessels."

Samoan Independence to Be Maintained.

NEW YORK, April 15.—The World says that Secretary Blaine's instructions to the commissioners who will represent the United States at the Berlin conference insist on the maintenance of Samoan independence.

The United States will pay no indemnity for the alleged aggressions of American citizens in Samoa, the proof being deemed conclusive that Mr. Klein, a newspaper correspondent, sought to avert bloodshed, not to provoke it.

THE ABANDONED DANMARK.

It or Its Passengers Have Not Been Seen or Heard Of.

NEW YORK, April 15.—None of the vessels which arrived in port brought any news of the fate of the passengers of the abandoned steamer Danmark. The Amsterdam, from Rotterdam, and La Champagne, from Havre, both reported heavy weather.

The Amsterdam passed the spot where the City of Chester had the day before sighted the Danmark, but nothing was then visible. The Amsterdam brings 37 cabin and 428 steerage passengers. La Champagne brings 84 cabin and 852 steerage passengers.

The steamer Servia and the Polania, from Hamburg, arrived off quarantine yesterday evening. Neither brings any news of the Danmark, though they followed about the same course that the Danmark took. They experienced reasonably good weather. The agents of the Thingvalla line hope that the Helvetia or Servia, who are expected to arrive to-morrow, will bring the Danmark's passengers. It is also possible that some ship has picked up the Danmark's people and made for the Azores, 450 miles from the locality where the Danmark is supposed to have become disabled. There is no telegraphic communication with the Azores.

DRIVEN TO INSANITY.

Serious Result of the Indiana White Cap Trials.

CORYDON, Ind., April 15.—At the close of the recent White Cap trial at Leavenworth the Gregory family, including Bory Gregory, his daughter, Miss Dora, and his son, William L., the alleged captain of the White Caps, started home in a wagon. When they reached home the daughter was in a critical condition and the father was a raving maniac. The team had run away and demolished the wagon, and the condition of Mr. Gregory and his daughter was attributed to injuries received by the runaway. The real facts have been made known, and are as follows:

When within two miles of home Mr. Gregory was seized with a sudden fit of insanity, and, drawing his revolver, he leaped from the wagon. He then cocked the pistol and placed the muzzle at his temple, but before he could fire, his son and daughter had hold of him. In the scuffle that ensued the revolver was discharged, the ball penetrating the young lady's right side. The team became frightened at the report of the revolver and ran away. Mr. Gregory has not fully recovered his reason, but it is thought that it will finally be restored. His daughter is improving, but is yet in a precarious condition. She was to have been married in a few days.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., April 15.—Mrs. Becky King, aged 40 years, an invalid, living near this city, was burned to death on her bed Friday afternoon. She was alone, and it is supposed that in lighting her pipe set her bed on fire.

Musick, of Missouri, has been appointed to the office vacated by Mr. Dawson.

Three Democratic messengers in the internal revenue bureau were dismissed.

Benefit of the Fish Commission.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—No department of scientific work conducted under government auspices shows better or more satisfactory results than that of the fish commission. Evidences of this come to the commission here frequently. The fish commission of Arizona has written to Commissioner McDonald that Indians have caught shad in the Colorado river in that territory within the past few weeks of a size that amply repays them for their labor and time involved. The first deposit or planting of fry in the river was made three years ago, and has been followed by a new one every year since. Lake Utah in the territory of that name has also yielded satisfactory returns from a planting made only year before last. One of the officials of the commission states that reports from San Francisco are to the effect that shad, the product of eastern fry, planted in the waters of California, are plentiful in the markets of that city and of reasonable price.

The methods of the commission are finding favor with the fishermen of the country, who at first not only viewed them with dislike, but were violently opposed to them. There are now nineteen hatching stations operated by the commission, and three new ones are provided for by the appropriation bill of 1889. At the central station in this city there has just been completed the work of hatching out the eggs of trout and white fish spawns, which requires about half a year, and in a fortnight the commission will start out a car for the general distribution of the fry.

Preparations are now being made to hatch out shad spawn a rapid process, requiring only from four to ten days. When that is completed a second car will be started. Last year 153,000,000 shad and about 80,000,000 trout fry were distributed over the country. Commissioner McDonald has not yet mapped out the summer's work under the auspices of the commission, but, as in past years, it will doubtless comprise several excursions into the Atlantic and Pacific ocean for the discovery of a new species of fish.

Ready to Count the Money.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The committee of sixteen treasury experts, which includes Maj. Meline, of the secretary's office; Capt. McMellan, of the first auditor's, and Samuel C. Lovejoy, of the register's office, appointed by Secretary Windom to count the New York sub-treasury cash before it is transferred to Mr. Roberts, the new assistant United States treasurer there have left for New York city. The examination and count will commence to-morrow and will probably last three weeks.

Colored People to Celebrate.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The colored people of Washington and the District of Columbia will, on Tuesday next, celebrate the twenty-seventh anniversary of their emancipation. If the weather is favorable the parade will probably be the largest of its kind ever known in Washington. There will be 5,000 men in line. A number of visiting colored militia and civic organizations from Baltimore, Richmond and other places will form a prominent feature of the parade.

A Woman Seriously Injured.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The wife of Rear Admiral Fleiger was thrown from her carriage while driving along F street yesterday evening, and perhaps fatally injured. Her skull was fractured and one of her arms broken. Late last night her physicians express little hopes of her recovery.

He Crossed Over Alone.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Dr. J. R. Gyles, aged 65 years, for forty years a physician in this city, committed suicide Sunday morning at his home, No. 417 West Twenty-third street, by taking strychnine. His wife was in the room while he was mixing the poison, and he asked her to drink some of it, not saying what it was. She thought it was magnesia, but said she did not need any. After she left the room she heard groans, and returning found her husband dying. He had evidently intended that his wife should die with him. He had suffered from melancholia for the past few years, owing to financial and professional troubles.

WHITE HOUSE GOSSIP.

The Executive Mansion Not Big Enough For a Business Office.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—A local writer contributes an article to yesterday's Post, in which it is argued that the executive mansion is no proper place for business; that the eastern parlor of the house now occupied by the clerical force should be turned over to the family of the president, and that the practice of presidential handshaking should be discontinued. In conclusion the writer says: "I am informed on the highest authority that the president contemplates taking the whole south front, first floor of the state department for executive business offices and establishing a routine of office hours."

Mrs Russell Harrison has recovered from her indisposition and Mrs. Scott H. Lord is the latest on the sick list. Col. John Wilson has had the plumbing of the White House thoroughly examined by expert plumbers, and it is pronounced to be in excellent condition.

The shops of the Portuguese, who are the principal tradesmen, have been sacked, entailing an estimated loss of $100,000.

Disorderly Strikers.

Buffalo Switchmen and Scoopers Necessitate Police Interference

RIOTING AT ROCHESTER.

An Effort Will Be Made to Run Street Cars in Minneapolis and Serious Trouble is Anticipated—A Mayor's Proclamation—Iron Mills at Youngstown, Ohio, will Not Shut Down—Miners Starving in Pennsylvania.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 15.—The strikers were obstreperous yesterday. In the evening a number of striking Erie switchmen entered the dining room of the Fillmore house, where ten or a dozen scabs who have taken their places are boarding, and began to quarrel with the men. One of the switchmen struck one of the scabs, when the latter drew a pistol and was about to use it, when a policeman interfered. Both were arrested.

Last night a similar disturbance was made at an adjoining hotel, where about forty scabs were boarding. In that case no blows were struck or arrests made, but some of the hotel employes were induced to go out.

The Scoopers' union held a stormy meeting yesterday to see whether they should strike or not upon the reinstatement of Boss Manly in the Niagara elevator. The union was divided, and feeling ran so high that the police cleared the hall. The crowd filled the street below for four blocks, and were only dispersed by the police charging on them in a platoon with drawn clubs. One arrest was made. It is anticipated that this is only the beginning of more serious trouble.

No Change at Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 15.—There is no change in the status of the strike of the street railway and motor line employes. The men continue firm, and declare that they will not give up the fight. Mass meetings were held Saturday night and yesterday afternoon, and local labor agitators advised the men not to give in. "Monopolists" were also strongly denounced.

President Lowry reiterated his determination to run cars to-day, and the attempt will undoubtedly be made. Mayor Babb issued a proclamation warning the strikers against attempting to interfere with the running of cars, and against creating disturbances on the streets.

Dissatisfied Railroad Men.

PITTSBURG, April 15.—The new insurance feature of the Baltimore and Ohio road has produced general dissatisfaction in this section. Last week three night crews in the yard and one day man quit work rather than sign the policies. A number of shop and yard employes at Glenwood have also given up their jobs, and at least ten of the employes at Connellsville declined to sign and were told to go. Some of the men have gone into the association under protest.

"If the Chicago employes stand firm," said he, "I should not be surprised to see the men on the eastern divisions stick to them. This is matter for the various brotherhoods to consider, but so far as I know no action has yet been taken by any of them."

Rochester Strikers Arrested.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 15.—There was comparative quiet to-day among the strikers, and cars were run without trouble in many instances. It is reported that one car had been thrown over in Hudson street, but no one was injured. The windows of several cars were broken with stones.

Early yesterday evening a mob surrounded a boarding house in Clinton street, where four drivers lived. The men became frightened, and, as their landlady cannot speak English they were somewhat troubled. The woman disguised herself and escaped to another house, where she sent a note to a telephone station asking aid. The patrol wagon was promptly on hand, and six men were arrested. The four drivers were taken to the Main street barns, where they will stay.

Destitute Coal Miners.

PHILLIPSBURG, Pa., April 15.—The Wage Earners Journal says: Many of the coal miners in the Clearfield coal districts are in destitute circumstances and from necessity, are seriously considering the matter of applying for relief from the township officials. Many of them have been without work since the first of the year and have not the means to pay for the commonest food and other necessary expenses.

SUICIDE BY SHOOTING.

An Army Officer Ends His Earthly Career Apparently Without a Cause.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., April 15.—About 11:30 o'clock Saturday night Capt. Ogden B. Read, of the Eleventh United States infantry, stationed at Plattsburg barracks, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. He had just returned from town, where he had gone to obtain admission to the court house to hear the arguments in the Harrison murder trial, now being conducted there. After greeting his wife he went into the sitting room. A moment later Mrs. Read heard a shot, and ran into the room, where she found her husband lying on the floor with blood flowing from a pistol shot wound in his mouth. He had placed a revolver in his mouth, and the ball penetrated the brain.

Capt. Read was 46 years old, a native of Colchester, Vt. He enlisted as a private in the Tenth Vermont volunteers in 1862, and gained promotion by brave and meritorious service to the rank of brevet major. He took part in navy battles, including those of the Wilderness and the siege of Petersburg. He was severely wounded by the explosion of the Petersburg mine in 1864. He was for sometime in the general recruiting service in the west, and for two years has been commanding officer at the Plattsburg barracks. He was highly respected in this community. He leaves a widow and three children. The motive for the suicide is not known.

Charles Hodges and Evan Madden were blown to pieces by an explosion of gas in a mine near Wilkesbarre, Pa.

John Jackson, president of the Elevator company, at St. Louis, committed suicide because of losses in speculation.

A Steamer Damaged by Fire.

NEW YORK, April 15.—The steamer Rio Grande, of the Mallory line, was damaged to the extent of $25,000 by fire at her dock yesterday. The vessel was being repaired at Roach's yard, and would have been ready to sail next Saturday, but the damage by fire will delay her two weeks longer. The origin of the fire is unknown.

The stock market was moderately active this morning. In the early dealings there was a drive made on Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, under which it rapidly declined and weakened the whole list. Prices at the first call were ¼ to 1¼ per cent. lower than those of last night. Toward 11 o'clock there was a good buying which continued until the close. The bank statement was very favorable, the reserves showing an increase of $4,755,975. The final figures were irregularly changed, but in most instances slightly higher. Atchison closed at about 1 per cent. below last night's prices. The sales for the morning amounted to 136,778 shares.

Frederick Douglass, now on a tour through the South, is said to have expressed his amazement at the advance of the colored race in the past few years. He says "there is no race problem"—a statement which rather disagrees with those of most Southerners. Mr. Douglass is of a sanguine temperament, and we can only hope that his cheerful prognostications may come true.

A RELIGIOUS FRAUD

A Young Y. M. C. A Man, Who Labored Here, Exposed at Richwood.

(From Richwood Gazette.)

There seems to be no end to the devices employed by the racially inclined portion of humanity to get money without earning it. There are specialists in dishonesty the same as there are in business and professional life. In legitimate business we find men who devote their efforts to one branch of trade, professional men who pursue one feature of their calling, there is become very expert in that particular line. So also in rogues. One class of dead beats confines itself to schemes in working the farmers, another pays exclusive attention to merchants, another plucks hotels and so on through a long category of crime.

Probably the meanest of all these frauds except the newspaper dead beat is the man who makes it a business to swindle ministers Preachers, as a rule, being unsuspecting, it is usually easy to impose upon them. A tale of distress with an appeal for help generally brings a response from them. A Richwood minister has about concluded that he was beaten by one of the great army of impostors

Several weeks ago a young man presented himself to one of our ministers and represented himself as an evangelist, his particular role being work among young men, and he could discourse beautifully on the subject of religion. He was entertained at the home of the minister, and in the evening attended Y. M. C. A meeting, where he made a glowing appeal to the young people to leave off the error of their ways, particularly urging young men to quit smoking. He bore down on the evil habit with much force and eloquence, flavored with a foreign accent. Some of his auditors, who observed that he wore brass finger rings, were not so deeply impressed with his solemn talk as they ought to have been, perhaps. It somehow seemed to them that there was a lack of consistency between his words and his ornaments

Before he left town he told the minister who was kindly entertaining him that he was short of funds, that his wife had promised to send him some money to Richwood, but it hadn't come, and he earnestly entreated his host to lend him a few dollars, promising to pay it back in a very short time, possibly the next day, if the expected remittance from his wife was received

Well, he got the money, and, so far, that is all the minister has heard of him directly. From others he learned that the same young man visited Marion and attempted to organize a Young Men's Christian Association there. But he was early detected in an effort to raise money and, not having satisfactory credentials and Dr Marion ministers perhaps being cradle more wary, minded them of our Richwood brother, the impressing young evangelist was advised that his services were no longer urgent demand there and that he could get a full of room and board [illegible] words to that effect and he quit [illegible]

[illegible] as [illegible] looks like the money he got would in some way be good to the parties [illegible] newspapers

WONDERFUL BLIND TOM

Something Concerning His Interesting Career. The Eighth Wonder of the World.

"Let Us Look Out."

Many readers who listened to the marvelous playing of Blind Tom, at Lyric [illegible] last evening, were taken off their feet with a very brief [illegible] and [illegible] of his history, and [illegible] reporter used on Mr. A. L. Bethune, Tom's present manager, yesterday, and secured the following facts: Blind Tom was born a slave on the Bethune estate, in Georgia, [illegible] before the war, his mother being a house servant in the family of Gen Bethune. Being born blind, the boy was permitted to stay at the house with his mother instead of being sent as a [illegible] to the fields. The Bethune family was wealthy and cultivated, and the [illegible] children were accomplished musicians. The little blind slave hearing the [illegible] of the house, would always be found in the parlor whenever the young ladies were playing the piano, and one day, when he was four years old, he was discovered at the piano, playing one of the selections that one of the girls had just rendered. At the age of six he was taken to New York, where he gave a concert, which created a great furore. His career thus begun, has continued for thirty-three years, during which time he has played in every civilized country on the globe, and in every town of 5,000 inhabitants and over in the United States, under the management of a son of General Bethune. The manager died about two years ago. He considered Tom his property, and at his death willed him, together with money, an estate amounting to several millions of dollars, which Tom had earned, to his wife, Mme Bethune, who was here with Tom last evening. The [illegible] who was interested by the sisters of the deceased manager, and the case was carried to the supreme court of the United States, when the high tribunal emancipated him from slavery, and declared him a free man. Being blind and dependent upon somebody else for protection, and idiotic and unlearned besides, he naturally remained with Mme. Bethune, to whom he became very much attached. Madame Bethune, who is very wealthy, has established Tom's aged mother in a palatial residence in New York with servants to care for her. Tom, however, does not know his own mother, not having enough nothing more to complete [illegible] the relationship. He never was known to [illegible] or cry from any feelings of gladness or sorrow, and mentally, aside from his musical genius, is [illegible] ness as a mere child. PHOTOGRAPHED IN BITS.

DISMEMBERED PHOTOGRAPHY HAS BECOME QUITE A CRAZE.

Pretty Hands, Necks, Shoulders, Elbows and Feet Copied for Friends—A Detroit Artist Talks of the Fad—Proud of His Wife's Pretty Foot.

"She is a crank on dismembered photography, and has herself taken in pieces," one lady remarked to another.

"Taken in pieces?"

"Yes, her hands, her arms—of course they are nice and plump—and her feet, too. Why, she has even had the back of her neck taken!"

All this, the speaker said, was done "in the east." But we also have our "cranks" and our "dismembered photography" in the west.

"Yes," said a Woodward avenue artist, "we have for some time taken hands or feet, and even backs of necks, right here in this gallery. It is a fad, popular with symmetrically shaped ladies. It pays us well and we have no fault to find."

Some negatives of dismembered photographs were brought out.

NEARLY ALWAYS SATISFIED.

The background in all cases was of dark plush, laid in heavy lustrous folds. Against this rich curtain a handsome hand, plump, slender, and with delicate nails, is really an object of admiration. No jewels are worn, as this detracts from the beauty of the member in itself. Some hands are laid carelessly against the plush, some show study in the seemingly idle way in which they are held up. A cute row of dimples add beauty to a few of the photographs. One or two belligerent ladies have had their fists taken, "to show how formidable they would be on the defensive racket, I suppose," said the potographer.

There were photos of hands, fists, feet, arms, shoulders and the backs of necks with bewitching little curls. Some amusing stories are told by the photographers in connection with dismembered photographs.

"A lady will come in and want a photograph of this sort. She has money, but not many classic lines that would bear reproducing by themselves. 'Will I have my hand and arm, or only the hand taken?' she asks. Well, we must manage to find out what she thinks of the member as a whole, and advise her accordingly. She is nearly always satisfied with the photo, and some of them are freaks of nature, I tell you; but 'So and So has one, and so must I,' is the principle on which society moves."

"What do ladies do with such pictures?" was asked.

"Well, now, when a young lady becomes engaged the first thing she does, if she has a good hand, is to give a photograph of it to her fiance. Then wrists or shoulders are taken for the oddity of the affair. Some coquettish misses—sometimes not over young ones, either—will have the backs of their necks taken to give to an admirer. Ladies have their own and their children's feet taken as souvenirs for their husbands. Some of them are plump and handsome.

DETROIT'S "KATISHAS."

"They make a pretty picture, too, when resting on a plush cushion. A lady from an interior town had a very pretty foot. She was in the city on a shopping tour, and was impressed with the dismembered photograph idea. She had one taken for her husband, who had often complimented her on the beauty of her feet. She sent it home, with strict orders to gaze on it as often as he was inclined, but to show it to no one else.

"A day or two after we received a note ordering a dozen of the photos. The order was filled, and when the lady got home and went visiting she was invited by her friends to inspect the family albums, in each of which that awful husband had inserted a photo of his wife's foot. She will have no more pictures taken for exclusive contemplation hereafter.

"Some ladies come in with another person whose hand or arm is taken and sent to the distant friends of the supposed owner. This is often the case with ladies who expect to inherit property from relatives they are never likely to meet, and whom they wish to impress with their good points."

Katisha had a left elbow that people "had come miles to see." There are evidently Katishas in Detroit who have elbows worthy of admiration. A few photos of elbows—dimpled and pink tinted—have been taken in this city. It cannot be said that an elbow has any particular beauty when transferred to a photograph, but "everything goes" as long as the "fad" lasts.

A lady artist in the Whitney block has a "run" on plump hands and dainty feet. She transfers them to canvas, and very lifelike they look, with some rich shade of plush for a background. It is said that this artist has an abundance of work of this character from the best families of the city. These paintings are not intended for the parlor, more's the pity, but ornament milady's boudoir. Dismembered photographs cost the full price, $3 to $5 per dozen. Minuties at $1.50 and $1.25 make a convenient size for carrying one's hand or foot in one's pocket.—Detroit Free Press.

Rattlesnake and Cow.

Horses and cattle, it is frequently said, rarely, if ever, suffer death from the bite of a rattlesnake. But a hunter in the Potomac valley came upon the evidences of a double tragedy which goes to disprove this opinion.

While hunting the other day I found the dead body of a cow. She had not been long dead. I was speculating as to the cause of her death when I noticed a large rattlesnake dangling from one of her crumpled horns.

The indications were that the cow had seen the snake coiled and in the act of springing upon her, and had accordingly hooked the reptile, the horn penetrating the snake's body so that the rattler was unable to free himself. The cow's horn had pierced and killed the rattler, but the snake's fangs and killed the cow.—Youth's Companion.

THE NEWLY WED.

A Pullman Porter Tells How He Spots Them—Evils of the Rice Habit.

It is a Pullman porter, who is talking to an attentive scribe.

"Hardly a week goes by," says the porter, "that I don't see a bridal couple just starting out on their honeymoon. I don't exactly know how I can tell them, but they are as plainly marked to my eyes as if they had the words 'bride' and 'groom' stamped in big letters on their foreheads. There is something about them that gives the whole situation away; a kind of a cling-right-next-to-me-darling air. Of course, I have made a mistake now and then, but it is very seldom I do, and I've often found out, after changing my mind two or three times, that I was right after all, though certain appearances were against it. We generally have a test which never fails, and when a doubtful party comes along we spring it on them, just to be sure, you know.

"What's the test? Well, I'll tell you. Not many weeks ago a couple got into my car and sat down very quietly in their arm chairs as if they had been used to it all their lives. These didn't seem to have the bride and groom air about them at all, and from external appearances they might have been brother and sister or married for years, but still there was a something there that made me suspicious, so when I saw them together I went to the news company's boy and I says: 'Bill, here's a doubtful party; get out the sample copies.'

"So Bill got his tests and started through the car. He handed books to everybody, and when he came to the suspected party he took out of his pile two little books, and said, so nearly everybody could hear him: 'Very useful books, sir; hints on housekeeping and hints to newly married people. Only 25 cents.'

"That did it. The girl got as red as a rose and the man blushed and said a weak sort of 'N-n-n-no.' Then they looked at each other and sort of snickered, and I caught him full in the eyes and smiled a sweet smile, giving him a respectful wink at the same time. It was all settled in a minute, and there was no doubt about it. Well, he took it very good naturedly, and asked me afterward how in the world he had given himself away—he couldn't imagine. I believe we could always tell, and talked so nicely he gave me a dollar when I got through with him.

"There are plenty of other giveaways by which I can spot a bride and a groom, and they are safe generally as the test. One day a couple came in the car—which, by the way was jam full—and the moment they entered it was plain as day that they were newly wedded. I passed by them once or twice, and then went in my closet and got the dust pan and brush. I walked right up to where the bride was sitting and dusted up a panful of rice that lay on the floor around her in a complete circle. Well, if the people in that car didn't laugh, I'm another.

"The custom of throwing rice after a bridal couple always makes it unpleasant for the party, as lots of rice is almost sure to stick to their clothes, hats and in their hair. About the funniest rice thing I ever saw was that which happened in my car just two or three weeks ago. A couple came in, and the test revealed to me that they were bride and groom. They didn't seem to take kindly to it, however, and we couldn't get any satisfaction out of them at all. By and by the man said to his wife: 'Seems to me this umbrella is not rolled up very nice.'

"Then he carefully unrolled it, and, bezing! out came three or four pocketfuls of rice all over the seats and floor. Their friends had rolled up a lot inside the folds of the umbrella, and, next to the young man I heard tell about who, when he went to sign his name in a hotel register, dropped a lot of rice on the book when he took off his hat, it was the most binding thing I ever knew."—Philadelphia Record.

Correct Pronunciation.

I heard the other day that a prominent clergyman recently lost a call to a leading church because when preaching a sermon as a candidate he pronounced a single word incorrectly. "Oh, doctor, that was a lovely sermon you preached this morning," said a lady recently to her pastor in a large New England town, "but if you will pardon me for mentioning it, its effect was very much impaired by a little slip in pronunciation; you placed the accent on the second syllable of the word 'obligatory' instead of on the first." The lady in question was one of those dangerously intelligent women to be found everywhere in New England, and was a member of a ladies' orthoepy society which made life a burden to everybody in the town. Knowing this, the clergyman tried to keep up with all the recondite pronunciations in vogue, but once in a while he made a slip, as in the above instance, and at once heard from some of the good ladies. Correct pronunciation is of course desirable, but it is a little absurd to make a fetich of it.—New York Tribune.

Not Inquisitive.

There was dust on his back and grime of two weeks' standing behind his ears, and as he stood on a corner, yesterday, he was heard to remark that he was from Lansing.

"What is the fare from Lansing to Detroit?" queried a dudish looking bystander, looking waggishly an an acquaintance.

"I dunno," was the reply.

"Don't know!" echoed his questioner, incredulously.

"Young man," returned the tramp, impressively, "when I want to go to a place by rail I get quietly on the train, and when it gets there I step off again without asking any blooming fool questions."—Detroit Free Press.

Method in His Silence.

"Bolton told me he had borrowed some money from you. I was surprised, because I never heard you say anything about it."

OPERA GLASS MACHINES.

GOING ALL RIGHT AND MAKING LOTS OF FUN AND MONEY.

Sometimes One Don't Work, and the Dime Must Be Refunded—A Dividend of One Per Cent. the First Month—Stuffing Hairpins and Other Trash Into the Slot.

Many humorous incidents have attended the introduction of the new fangled opera glass machinery at the theatres. The theatre ushers say that the machines are more fun than a circus when the wheels that operate the spring that unlocks the box lid gets in a snarl. But the fun is enjoyed by the spectators, and not by the ushers. The theatre goer whose dime gets stuck in the slot generally makes about thirteen and a half times more fuss over the prospective loss of the dime than a man whose favorite corn is stepped on by the inconsiderate man who persists in going out to see another man between the acts. Recently at the Casino a man in a dress suit, with bank notes in his waistcoat pocket, made a commotion that disturbed the whole parquet assemblage for fully twenty minutes because the usher told him he couldn't get his money back until the next morning at the box office. Two ushers had to scurry around and hunt up the president of the company that runs the boxes to soothe the wrath of the would be patron by handing him back the quarter he had dropped into the slot that was out of order. It costs a quarter instead of a dime, by the way, to get a glass at the Casino. Outbreaks of this this sort are getting less frequent, though, and intending explosions of wrath are headed off by the timely arrival of the usher, who, as soon as he finds that a box won't work, tries another that will without extra expense to the theatre goer. There's plenty of fun, though, when the box selects a cantankerous theatergoer as a victim for 'ts cranky wrinkles. This happens one night a week, anyhow, and sometimes oftener.

GROWING IN POPULARITY.

The boxes are growing in popularity despite these drawbacks. That is proved by the increased number used and by the general introduction of the mechanisms in the city theatres. The dime slot boxes are now in use in eight theatres, and contracts have been made for their introduction into many out of town theatres. On an average 125 boxes are put into a theatre of the size of the Fifth Avenue. Of these between fifty and seventy-five are used nightly. That this is sufficient to return a satisfactory profit is shown by the fact that in the first month of the experiment with the dime slot mechanisms the company paid a dividend of 1 per cent. to Mrs. Langtry and other stockholders. It has been found that the idea tickles the children, and mothers and nurses drop money into the slots just for the sake of seeing the little ones open their eyes in delight when the lid pops up and reveals the opera glass snugly fitted in the box.

Every night after the play an agent of the company goes around from box to box and collects the coins. In the first weeks of the experiment the tour was made unexpectedly interesting by the amount of unique bric-a-brac that was gathered up from the slots instead of the looked for silver coin. Lead dimes, little souvenir medals of brass and lead, and bent pins were found in the slots. Hairpins, too, were collected in bunches at every tour. In fact, the hairpin seems to be the favorite implement used by the conscienceless theatre goers who put up schemes to beat the slot. But it is a waste of hairpins and also of centennial medals and lead coins to try and palm them off on the machine for the genuine dime or quarter of commerce. The machines are made to bend and break all such nondescript counterfeits. And nothing but silver goes through successfully. The only effect of trying to beat the machine is to throw it out of order, and about ten of the machines are in the hospital for repairs each week.

WHY THEY ARE NOT RED.

It was early discovered by dishonest theatre goers that the lids of the boxes cannot be locked, except by a special key, after the opera glasses have been used. A number of the glasses were stolen in the first week, but the pilfering of the boxes has since ceased. Detectives keep a watch on the boxes at each theatre. They caught a well dressed theatre goer walking off with a glass one night recently at the Fifth Avenue theatre, and he was arraigned in court, and only escaped prosecution for the larceny because imprisonment meant the ruin of his little family. On several occasions theatre goers have pocketed the glasses in a fit of absentmindedness and returned them afterward.

"Why don't you paint the glasses red, so that they can be told right off?" a theatre goer asked Stockholder Joe Reynolds the other night.

"Oh, that would burst the whole enterprise at one fell swoop," he said. "You can never get a theatre goer to hire anything that bears on its face the unmistakable evidence that it is hired. It shocks the public's pride too much. As long as the glasses look like private glasses the thing goes. Not otherwise."

The directors of the dime slot machines are considering the advisability of raising the ante on a glass to the Casino limit of twenty-five cents a peep. Some of the stockholders object.

"It won't work," they say, "unless you put a lot of women in tights on the stage to look at. Then you may hope to collar the quarters of the dizzy dudes and the flamboyant bald headed men."

This argument is reported to have brought a delay in the proposed increase.

A new form of case has just been designed. It is made of fine plate glass in the form of a tiny show case with a bowed front. The front is made to slide upward, like the cover of an office desk. If you drop a coin into the slot you can see it slide down and watch it work the machinery that opens the sliding cover. —New York Sun.

Time Between Sentence and Execution.

The rule in England, even in cases where there is no doubt that the sentence will be carried out, allows three Sundays only to intervene between the trial and the execution—so that if a man is tried on a Saturday, he has very little more than a fortnight allowed him to prepare; but where there is hope of a reprieve the delay of the announcement that the man is to die till within a few hours of his execution not only adds a torturing element to his punishment which he has not legally incurred, but it limits the time of his real preparation to the one last agitating day when his friends come to take a final leave of him. The matter is not one of minor importance, as was keenly felt, we believe, by the saintly Abbe Groze, the chaplain of La Roquette, in Paris, who ministered to all the culprits that during a period of twenty-five years expiated their crimes on the guillotine.

The French system of leaving a man in complete ignorance of the time when his execution is to take place until the fatal hour actually arrives told very heavily against that good priest's efforts to bring such criminals as Tropman, Avignoin and Billoir to a fit state of preparation for their entrance on the dread eternity. The strange laxity of French prison discipline allowed some of the time that even these men to be engaged in playing cards with their jailers till within a few hours of their death, but it may be doubted whether the more decent provisions of our English custom, which dedicates a condemned man's last day to farewell interviews with his friends, can avail to render that brief space of time sufficient for the heavy responsibilities with which it is weighted.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Gallery Critics.

The well-to-do man who goes to the theatre in a dress suit and sits in a box, or in a seat just back of the orchestra, has a good view of the play and the players, but I doubt if he gets as much pleasure therefrom as the ragged newsboy who sits in the gallery, just under the roof.

At the boy's distance the illusion is complete. The footlights are not too bright, and the music becomes a low, indistinct melody. I have heard more criticism in the gallery of a Broadway theatre during a single performance than I could write in an entire day.

"The Silver King," with a well known actor in the leading role, was played on the east side some time in the beginning of the season. My neighbor was a lad of 14 years, who answered to the name of Rocksey. His chum arrived at the close of the first act, but he had evidently seen the play before, for he knew it by heart.

"Hey, Rocksey, how's he a-doin't it?" was the first question.

"Oh, he's overdoin' it horribly; he can't act till he gets t'ree or four drinks into 'im. The villain's the worst stuff I ever saw. He just stands around waitin' for his time for gettin' killed. I'd like to see a play where the villain gets killed before the curtain goes up."

The gallery gods can furnish an untold amount of gossip about the personality of people on the stage, and the tales have as much truth in them as the stage stories which emanate from more important sources.—New York News.

A Famous Chateau.

Of Adelina Patti's latest acquisition, the famous Chateau de Chenonceaux, a correspondent writes from Paris: "It was here that Francis I conversed with Bayard on the happiness and glory of France, and it was in the sitting room that the monarch, the friend of letters, received into his friendship Rousard and Clement Marot; it was under these trees that Marie Stuart and Anne Boleyn, then brilliant in youth and beauty, walked in their sweet dreams of happiness; it was in this mysterious oratory that Claude of France, daughter of Louis XII, had so often prayed. Here are also the subterranean passages where, at the time of the conspiracy of Amboise, Diane of Poictiers, concealed the chief of the French nobles from the rage of Catherine de Medici. Finally, it was on these beautiful banks of the River Cher that Delville wrote some part of his poem 'Des Jerdins;' Thomas, a few of his 'Eloges Historiques;' Marmontel, his prettiest 'Contes Morceaux;' Barthelemy, the introduction of his 'Anarchartis,' and there is that delightful sylvan walk which J. J. Rousseau speaks of with such intoxicating delight, where he loved to meditate and where it is thought his immortal work on education had its foundation."—Chicago Herald.

A Frequent Occurrence.

"The next time I give a woman my seat in a car she will have to be old or lame or have a baby or a bundle in her arms, or look ill, or be in a worse condition than ordinary," said a well known politician. "I had a choice seat in a Brooklyn elevated car a few nights ago. A big crowd got in at one of the stations, and I reluctantly surrendered my seat to a healthy looking woman. I was dead tired, and I hung on to a strap for several stations. Then the man who occupied a seat next to the woman who had benefited by my courtesy vacated his place. Before I could wink, this woman, for whose sake I had stood up in a jerky car for a mile, pulled her callow escort, who was evidently her son, into the vacant seat. This same thing has happened many times, but it will never happen again to me."—New York Sun.

He Is a Policeman.

"You must arrest Tascott."

"Arrest Tascott! You forget, Bridget, that I'm a policeman."—Chicago Herald.

THE ROSES BY THE RUN.

The roses and the clover
Are very sweet and fair,
And I love the fragrant odors
They breathe upon the air;
But sweeter seemed the blossoms
Beside the meadow run,
The time that you were twenty
And I was twenty-one.

How fondly I remember
The time we called them there,
And 'neath the shady maples
I wove them in your hair;
How there in bliss we tarried
Until the set of sun,
The time that you were twenty
And I was twenty-one.

It may have been the flowers,
Perhaps a look from thee,
That bade me whisper softly
How dear thou were to me;
I never stopped to question,
I only know 'twas done,
The time that you were twenty
And I was twenty-one.

We've had our summer, darling,
The flekts of life are brown,
We've traveled up the hill side,
We're on our journey down;
Yet oft I wake from dreaming
Those days have just begun—
That you again are twenty
And I am twenty-one.

When life and love are over,
And I am laid at rest,
I hope some one will gather
And place upon my breast
Such flow'rs as used to blossom
Beside the meadow run,
The time that you were twenty
And I was twenty-one.

A Snake's Battle with a Cat.

It is not often that a newspaper man comes across two true snake stories in one day, but a reporter heard yesterday of two which are well authenticated. Mr. Cyronius Hall, the artist, has a summer home at Isle of Hope. Three weeks ago Mrs. Hall, to encourage her hens to lay, bought a half dozen china nest eggs and placed them in their nests. On looking for them a few days after they were not to be found, nor were there any sugar bowls or tea sets about to show that the china eggs had hatched. The disappearance of the eggs was a mystery, until one day last week a chicken snake was killed on Mr. Hall's farm, and two china eggs were found inside of it. His snakeship had been doubtless suffering from dyspepsia for several weeks.

Mr. Hall's snake experience did not end with the eggs, however. That gentleman has a large cat, which is said to be one of the best and bravest of the feline species. A few nights ago the cat was locked in the store room. During the night a terrific noise was heard emanating from the room, and it was supposed that a strange cat had gotten in and the house cat was trying to put it out. Mr. Hall went to the place and let the cat (or, as he supposed, two cats) out. In the morning a large, headless, black snake was found in the store room. It had evidently attacked the cat, and, true to its constrictor instincts, tried to crush it, but the cat gnawed the snake's head off and escaped.—Savannah News.

Two Homeless Dwarfs.

Sussex county, Del., is proud in the possession of the Misses Marine, two remarkable little dwarfs, who were born and reared in that county. The oldest, Miss Lizzie, lacks three inches of being three feet tall, has a head in proportion to the rest of her body; is very intelligent, conversing fluently with all with whom she comes in contact, despite the fact that she weighed but forty-five pounds and must stand on a chair in order to put her head on a level with the shoulder of an ordinary person. But stand on a chair or anything else she cannot, neither can her sister, for the reason that neither are provided with those very necessary adjuncts to standing—bones. A sort of cartilage answers in place of the bones, enabling the little mites to move hands or feet with perfect ease. Both use the fingers quite nimbly, doing all sorts of needle work, such as embroidery, etc., although the fingers may be bent in any direction desired without the least sensation of pain, being almost as pliable as so many little ropes. —J. W. Wright in St. Louis Republic.

The First Law of Nature.

"I have a new story, told by the late Col. Gag Fake, which has never been in print," said the visitor, "and which never failed to set the table in a roar when"—The editor opened a drawer and drew from thence a large saw handled pistol carrying a ball that would weigh about three to the pound. "Do you want it printed?" he asked sternly, "or are you going to tell it?" The visitor turned pale; "I thought you might like to print it," he said feebly. "Shake!" said the editor, joyously, as he replaced the artillery, "write it out and take it to the foreman; we'll be very glad to print it. Got any more?"—Bob Burdette.

A Man of Much Importance.

Nathaniel Parker, of East Burke, Vt., runs the mill lumber to Folsom's Crossing, runs the mail from Lyndonville to East Burke, runs the livery, runs the hotel, runs the Good Templars' lodge, runs the singing school, runs the choir, runs the Sunday school as superintendent, and holds himself in readiness to run any other department of village industry which is not running lively already.—Boston Herald.

Cathedral of St. Pierre.

The venerable cathedral of St. Pierre, in Geneva, in which Calvin preached in his day, is to be restored. It is intended to renew the main facade and to finish the tower on the north side, besides altering and embellishing the interior at an expense estimated at 550,000 francs. A company has been formed for the purpose, after the pattern of the one which restored the Minster of Bale.—New York Home Journal.

It is a mistake to paint sin too alluring and attractive. It makes young people want some. As a matter of fact sin is ugly and full of misery and pain, no matter how it may be colored or sugar coated.

Testimony in a recent suit brought by Harris, of Philadelphia, to obtain wages due him, revealed the fact that he had been employed to make trousers for 90 cents a dozen, or 7½ cents a pair.

MEN AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN.

Pointers One Gets Upon the Streets Concerning Current Affairs.

There is a hen on and the long-looked-for egg may be found in the nest ere long. We have it that a syndicate has been formed to buy the M. E. Church property and build an opera house block thereon. At any rate a syndicate has made an offer for the property, and the offer is commanding serious consideration. The opera house feature is said to be one of the objects of the syndicate.

***

When the new opera house comes Music Hall will not be forgotten. It is a capital place for the dances, carnivals and fairs that prove an essential part of our existence. Indeed it would seem necessary to abandon the churches if the fairs and carnivals that help support them were to be abandoned.

***

A dark horse is said to have entered the postoffice race from a back alley, after night, and he is galloping along at a prodigious speed without many knowing it. Further the deponent sayeth not.

***

Is there a "President Reed," of the Scioto Water company. We refer to Charley Reed, who has been identified with the waterworks matter since Howland & Ellis investigated themselves here. If there is any kicking on the waterworks to be done, Mr. Reed will hear it patiently in his official capacity. But it is said work will be pushed along so rapidly and thoroughly that there will be no occasion for kicking.

***

Burglars have been attempting entrances at various residences about town, but so far—of late—only broken blinds or locks have been the result. The people seem to be keeping "the barn locked ahead of the thief." But this theme reminds us of a funny incident recently. A prominent east Center street resident had been annoyed during the night by attempts of burglars to enter his house and he advised the police. He was paralyzed by the officer's answer, as follows: "Rats, some one is playing a joke on you."

***

The new Council is going to have no end to petitions for street improvement. Indeed they have begun already at a special session of the Council. It is a significant fact that Patterson street was the first with a petition. This will quiet the fears of those who had erroneously concluded that Stump Town wouldn't want the earth this summer. But that "extensively traveled" part of the city needs attention.

There is no early interest in the fall political crop, locally speaking, that other counties have been experiencing by nominating by the primary vote at the spring election. By the way, a year ago last fall, the biggest Democratic convention ever held here, passed a resolution to nominate by that plan. What has become of it? Frank Salter was father of the resolution, and he might know something of its fate. It was suspected at the time that the convention didn't know what it was doing.

Most of the candidates will come in for renomination, and they will hardly be opposed in convention or at the polls, should Kelly and Treasurer Cook win worthy [illegible] so hard before will doubtless have some majorities. The genial Patsy has made a capital sheriff, and George Cook has given a more business like administration of the treasury than it has had in many years. Auditor Clark will come up for renomination and election, and he will have easy sailing despite Goose Creek and other troublesome ditches.
